From F. P. Hilburn.

I observe in a late issue of the REGISTER a quotation of parts of a speech, the latter part of which I most unqualifiedly endorse. But the first part, it seems to me, is incompatible with the second. Let me quote:

"I desire to insist to you that there is no good obtained by restraint of people's natural inclinations, or by forcible regulation of their habits, which is half so good as freedom itself."

This is anarchy, pure and simple. Not the wild-eyed kind that wants to accomplish its ends by the destruction of rulers, but anarchy, nevertheless. And I am not using the term in its commonly accepted meaning, because anarchy does not necessarily mean murder. A little thought reveals the fact that when society was organized individuals had to surrender a part of their liberties. Just as one who marries surrenders a part of his liberty—society is organized for the common good.

Now what are natural inclinations? Suppose, for instance, that I felt inclined to pass through the streets of the city of Ironton in a nude condition; I would be injuring no one on earth, and yet Bro. Ake would have me arrested and the city authorities would force me to wear clothes against my "natural inclinations." Again, let us suppose that two healthy sane young people wish to marry. They love each other and they have a "natural inclination" toward each other, but the State says, no, you are too closely related by blood and your offspring might be idiots, and you must therefore not follow your "natural inclinations." Is the State right or wrong?

Let me quote again: "That, as Herbert Spencer puts it, the ultimate result of protecting men from the consequences of their follies is to fill the world with fools." Herbert Spencer was a great man, and it were presumption on my part to question his wisdom, but will his statement apply in the cases cited?

We put a ring in the hog's nose before we turn him into the clover field. Not that we don't wish him to eat the clover, but we wish to restrain his "natural inclination" to root, which would destroy the clover and cut short his supply of food. Why, Bro. Ake, I have seen men grow rich by practices that you would scorn to follow. Are they more fit to survive than you? Mozart is said to have died in abject poverty, while thousands of men who never had a redeeming quality have lived to a ripe old age, surrounded by wealth that others had created.

We all want the daily paper, the telegraph, the telephone, the palace car and many other luxuries of modern times, but we cannot have these things unless some men, at least, are willing to do the necessary useful labor. And these men when they place their brawn and brain at the disposal of society are entitled to the protection of society from the hogs of commerce, who fatten upon the wants of the people; who get possession of our natural resources and great industries and exact tribute. They are just as much robbers as the barons of old, who sallied forth from their castle walls.

Yes, the people's will is the court of last resort, but they sometimes have to resort to bloodshed to enforce their mandates. You are opposed to sumptuary laws, and so am I; because I think there is a better way. Another time I will give my views along this line.

Pennsylvania will now try to punish the members of the "party which does things" for stealing $8,000,000 of the $13,000,000 appropriated to build and equip a new State capital. Nobody now denies that it is most dangerous to permit Republicans to have access to real cash money. The sub-treasurers at St. Louis, Chicago and New York are anxious to swear to that fact. They each lost large sums from their offices and nobody has yet been punished.—Kansas City Post.

The Man With Dandruff

Clearman-Duty.

Mr. G. M. Clearman and Miss Grace Duty were united in the holy bonds of wedlock Wednesday, August 28, 1907, at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Duty, father of the bride, officiating. The worthy couple are well and favorably known in this community and highly esteemed by a host of friends, who extend hearty congratulations.

Only the relatives and a few friends were present, as the wedding was intended to be a quiet one. The newly married couple took their departure in the evening for a trip to Missouri and other points, when they will return and make their home on the groom's fine farm southeast of town.

The bride is a lady of many graces of mind and person, who is capable of filling the home she will adorn with happiness, and will prove to be truly a helpmate and companion to the husband she has chosen to honor with her hand. The groom is from one of our best families, and by those who know him, he is considered one of the substantial and industrious young men of the county. This paper is greatly pleased on this occasion to add its hearty good wishes to David A. Worley left last Friday night for Piedmont with a warrant for Amos J. Tucker, who is charged with assault with intent to rape, on information of Hattie Nash before Squire Kitchell, returning to-day with the prisoner, who waived examination and gave his bond in the sum of $200 for his appearance at the next term of circuit court. He claims he is not guilty.

Some of the boys were making considerable noise last night, but no fighting done. John Parris came home this evening from Ellington, where he has been working for the past nine months. This is his first trip home since going out to the hub factory there.

The case against C. M. Stevens, which was to have been tried here on the 21st, was continued to October 4th, on account of the attorney not being able to attend.

David Parris made a flying trip to Ellington and back to-day, leaving home in the morning and was back at 2:30 p. m. the same day, and only had one week on the road, badly spraining the thumb joints of both hands.

George W. Lashley has been very sick for a week, but is now better.

Ed. Summers, the tie contractor, will load out about 30,000 ties this week at this place.

The 5th of next month we vote wet or dry. Let us all go to the polls and cast our votes as we feel.

In the matter now before us. As to myself, I will cast a wet ticket and the judges can dry it the best they can.
